

Confined Space

Working in a confined space is one of the most potentially hazardous work operations an employee may perform. Confined space operations involve the potential for exposure to both chemical and physical hazards. The most common cause of injuries involved with confined space operations is employee failure to recognize the space and evaluate hazards prior to entry. Cal OSHA has requirements for confined space operations, including training, outlined in Title 8 CCR 5156, 5157 and 5158.

This Confined Space training program will be an awareness level program covering regulations for confined and permit-required confined spaces, identification and hazardous associated with confined spaces and permit required confined spaces, operations for working within confined spaces and permit

This course is taught by NES who has been providing OSHA, EPA, DOT and IATA mandated training programs throughout California and the United States for over 20 years. Their comprehensive courses combine appropriate classroom presentation, technical discussion, application to field activities, classroom exercise and field scenario and exercise activities. All NES instructional staff have both comprehensive technical and academic background and extensive hands-on field experience. NES instructor qualifications satisfy the OSHA, EPA, DOT, and IATA standards.
